

Women, Farmers, Youth: The Real Heroes Telangana Rising Global Summit 2025 Is Celebrating

Telangana Rising Global Summit 2025 is not just about CEOs and billion-dollar MoUs. On December 8 and 9 at Bharat Future City, the spotlight also shines on three groups who will actually build the three trillion dreams by 2047: women, farmers and youth.

The cameras may chase big announcements, but this time the stage belongs to them. From dedicated empowerment sessions to special showcases of grassroots success stories, the summit is designed so that every delegate, from Fortune 500 chiefs to global funds, leaves knowing that Telangana's rise is powered by its people.

Women leading the change

The summit puts women at the centre of the growth story rather than considering them as an afterthought. A big part of the agenda is devoted to women entrepreneurs, self help groups and tracks of leadership that cut across sectors. Sessions highlight women who turned DWCRA groups into businesses with turnover in crores, and founders who built deep tech and agri tech companies from Telangana that now serve national and global clients.

In conjunction with these tales, policy announcements strive to empower platforms such as WE Hub and establish more powerful funding channels of women run enterprises. The message is direct and forceful; Telangana wants to have by 2047 a future where at least half of the economic engines are women who not only own property but companies and decision makers at all levels.

Farmers at the heart of the 2047 vision

Agriculture is not being left behind as it is being redefined. Invitations to the round tables are received by special farmer groups and representatives of the rural population in which they deliberate on the topics of natural farming, water security, and soil health and better access to the market. Discussions on drone based services, soil health cards and digital crop advisory are placed next to plans for storage, processing and export hubs so that farmers gain stability instead of depending only on raw crop sales.

Summit visitors walk through exhibits that show indigenous seed banks, stories from Rythu Vedikas that raised incomes within a few seasons, and examples of villages that combined farming with eco tourism. This people first approach treats rural Telangana as a source of safe food, culture and wellness, and not only as a supplier of raw produce and labour for cities.

Youth: the talent engine of Telangana Rising

The youngest state in India is betting big on its youngest citizens. Telangana Rising Global Summit 2025 presents youth as the main engine of the three T economy of Talent, Trade and Technology. Students, innovators and young professionals see tracks on digital services, clean energy, electric mobility, life sciences, creative industries and advanced manufacturing.

New skill university campuses, incubation programmes and partnership announcements are aimed at creating thousands of internships and entry level jobs with global and national firms. Success stories from T Hub and other innovation platforms show how startups founded by people in their twenties have already grown into companies valued in hundreds of crores. This is not token presence; it is the core strategy to keep talent in the state and link it directly to new investment.

Real communities already living the dream

While leaders discuss empowerment inside Bharat Future City, just a short drive away there are communities already living the lifestyle that the summit describes. Planet Green has created living examples of how women, farmers and youth can lead sustainable growth in the east of Hyderabad. Carefully planned neighbourhoods blend modern infrastructure with natural greenery, giving families the space to farm, work and raise children in a chemical free environment.

Planet Green sets new standards for eco communities where community farming, wellness zones and green corridors become part of daily life. Two projects inside this canvas show how the vision works on the ground. Farm Natura, often described as “Natura, India first farming estates naturally”, puts farmers and families in charge. Women manage shared plots, youth learn natural farming, and children grow up eating safe food harvested from their own backyard. It has become a meaningful weekend destination and a working model for organic Telangana 2047. Dates County adds the premium touch with landscaped greenery, wellness amenities, clubhouse and jogging tracks that feel like a resort. Young professionals and women entrepreneurs choose to live here because success does not come at the cost of nature; comfort and responsibility stay together.

Why this people first focus changes everything

For global investors, communities that are stable, skilled and aspirational lower risk and raise the chance of long term returns. Talent pipelines, strong local demand and eco friendly townships mean that projects can grow for decades instead of only for a short cycle. For citizens, the summit is proof that growth is meant to reach every home, farm and classroom, not just glass towers on the skyline.

When Telangana rises, it rises together. If the commitments made at Bharat Future City turn into visible projects, women gain stronger businesses, farmers gain more secure incomes, youth gain better jobs and families gain healthier, greener places to live. That is why the real heroes of Telangana Rising Global Summit 2025 are not only on the stage, but in every village and neighbourhood that this vision is written for.
